Meeting the challenges of Agriculture and Forestry with Commissioner Bob Odom

The Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry is hosting a number of Louisiana food manufacturers at the 4th Annual European Ethnic & Specialty Food Show in Paris June 13-14, according to Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Bob Odom.

The Paris show will feature specialty food buyers from throughout the continent of Europe as well as buyers from 23 other countries including Brazil, Argentina, Mexico, Indonesia, Australia, Thailand, Morocco, Israel, Japan, Malaysia, China and Vietnam.

"American ethnic food companies specifically invited to the show were those representing Cajun, Tex-Mex, New England seafood and Italian," Odom said. "This gives our Cajun food specialty items an excellent stage on which to showcase Cajun products to countries around the world."

Food buyers representing major supermarket retail chains, catering companies, hotels and restaurants, wholesalers, importers and convenience stores will be at the Paris show adding to their clients' positions in ethnic and specialty foods products.

"Of course, one of the largest contingencies of buyers at the show will be from the major French supermarket chains. Statistics show that the French market for ethnic foods has been growing at about 20 percent a year.

"You might not think Cajun cooking would be much different from French cuisine, but the two cultures diverged 250 years ago, so there is a lot of interest, not to mention curiosity, in what Cajun French cooking is all about," Odom said. "That gives us an excellent entrée into that market."

Food products that will be displayed in the Louisiana booth at the USA pavilion include prepared jambalaya, etouffee, gumbo and dirty rice mixes; fish fry, shrimp fry and chicken fry batters; liquid and dry Cajun seasonings; marinades; and dessert mixes such as bread pudding, sweet potato cake, beignets and cobbles. Prepared Creole sauces and rouxes, and Cajun vegetables will also be featured.

A highlight of the Louisiana booth will be the appearance of Chef Roy Lyons, owner of Chef Roy's Frog City Café in Rayne. Lyons will prepare a Louisiana lunch buffet for the specialty food buyers, government officials and supermarket chain representatives, demonstrating the proper way to cook using Louisiana food products.

LDAF approves and promotes authentic Certified Louisiana and Certified Cajun Louisiana foods with an official logo marked on the packaging. The high demand for these products has been proven by the expansion of specialty and gourmet foods to more than 300 companies statewide. Louisiana is home to some 550 total food product manufacturing companies.

Environmental Quality Incentive Program Field Day

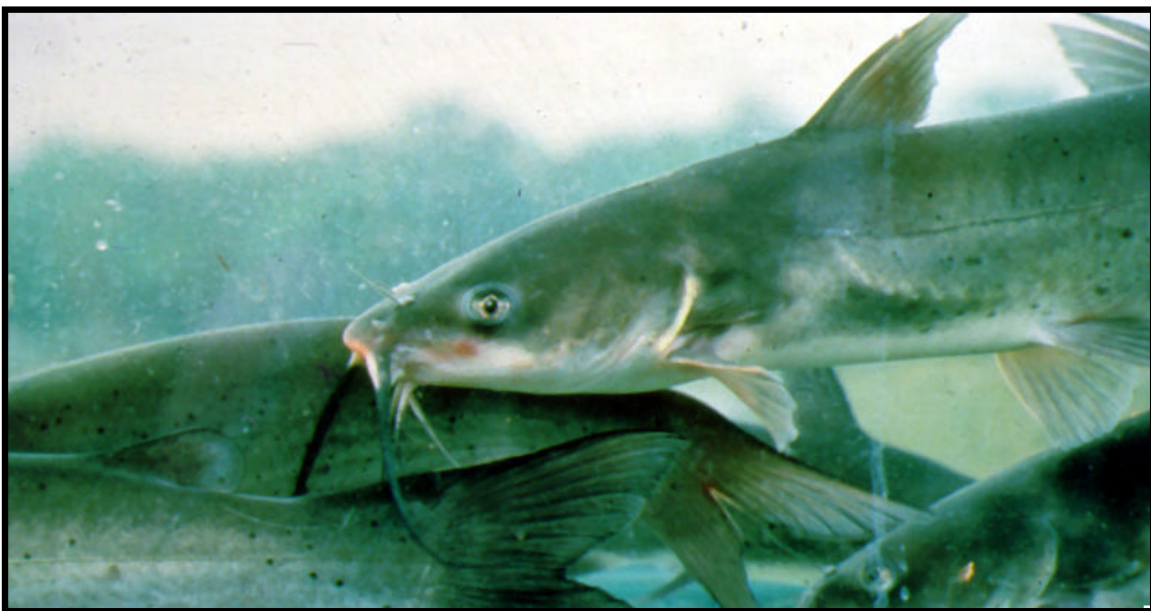

The Crawfish Research Center at the University of Louisiana at Lafayette and the Natural Resources Conservation Service are hosting an Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) field day at the university's Model Conservation Farm near St. Martinville. The free educational workshop will be held June 16 from 8 a.m. until noon.

Dr. Jay Huner, director of the Crawfish Research Center, says the EQIP program provides cost-sharing funds for landowners and farmers to implement environmentally friendly land management practices.

"A major aim of the field day is to provide landowners and farmers with information about the Environmental Quality Incentives Program," Huner explains. "Crawfish production in small ponds will be highlighted for limited resource landowners. Three EQIP conservation practices will be demonstrated including irrigation practices, crop residue management and shallow water wildlife habitat management."

The Model Conservation Farm is located off of La. Highway 92 (cont'd on p.7)

In Louisiana, 116 producers in over 14 thousand acres of catfish ponds grew 67 million pounds of farm raised catfish in calender year 2000. This production was valued at over $28 million at the farm gate.

Dr. Thune Awarded Catfish Research Grant

An LSU AgCenter researcher has been awarded $280,000 from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to continue research on controlling a bacterial disease in farm-raised catfish.

Dr. Ron Thune, professor of aquatic animal health in the LSU AgCenter's Department of Veterinary Science, received the funds to refine a vaccine he developed to control eiteric septicemia of catfish - ESC.

ESC is recognized as the No. 1 disease problem facing the U.S. catfish industry, Thune said. Industry experts estimate the disease robs about $125 million a year from the $2.5 billion U.S. catfish industry.

Thune's vaccine, which has been patented by the LSU AgCenter, holds promise as an effective replacement for antibiotic-treated feeds.

Because the antibiotics are given after fish show symptoms of ESC and because sick fish often stop eating, the treatment isn't effective in curing infected fish, according to Thune. The antibiotic feed, however, can still protect uninfected fish from becoming sick, he added.

A vaccine, on the other hand, gives healthy animals immunity from a disease.

The patented vaccine is derived from live, mutant bacteria. "It's a form of the bacteria that doesn't cause disease any longer," Thune said.

"We knocked out a gene," Thune said, adding, "It's a nutritional mutation so the bacteria can't grow."

The fish react as if the bacterium in the vaccine were a wild infection, so they mount an immune response. But the bacteria die out within 72 to 96 hours, leaving the fish uninfected but immune.

While developing vaccines from bacteria is a common practice, administering a vaccine to fish presents unique problems.

"With animals like cattle you can inject a vaccine," Thune said. "But fish are different. We're trying to treat populations when the value of the animal at treatment is about a dime. We're looking for creative alternatives."

Thune first started experimenting with a killed bacterium in fish feed but discovered it was ineffective in establishing immunity.

Then he tried the modified live bacteria and had success.

Thune first tried the vaccine with mixed results on very young fish, known as "fry," in a fish hatchery.

"Young fry don't respond as well as older fish - their immune systems aren't developed enough to react to the bacteria before they're put in large ponds," Thune said.

At only a few days old, the fry are transferred to fingerling ponds, where they'll stay for five to nine months until they grow to 5-8 inches long. Then they're moved to other ponds to finish growing.

Thune said vaccinating fish in ponds isn't economical because the relative amount of water in a catfish pond would require an extraordinary amount of the vaccine. Effective treatment under such circumstances requires a dilution between 1 part vaccine to 10 parts water and 1 part vaccine to 100 parts water.

Although fish could be vaccinated during the move from fingerling to growth ponds, they would still be at risk in the fingerling ponds.

"An infestation can result in 40-50 percent mortality in fingerlings," Thune said.

So the LSU AgCenter researcher now is back to trying to administer the live vaccine in fish food. If he can develop a way to do it, "The vaccine will be delivered from the inside out rather than from the outside in," he said.

And in addition to vaccinating fish for ESC, the bacterium also holds promise as a carrier for other substances that can provide additional immunities.

Fresh Louisiana Peaches

Amaretto Creme on Fresh Peaches

*4 egg yolks, lightly beaten

*1/2 sugar

2 tablespoons all purpose flour

*1 cup milk

1 tablespoon Amaretto or Almond flavored Liqueur

*1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract

*Fresh Louisiana Peach slices

Combine first 3 ingredients in a medium sauce pan. Gradually add milk, stirring until smooth. Cook over low heat stirring constantly for 6-7 minutes or until thermometer reaches 160 degrees. Remove from heat and stir in Amaretto and vanilla. Cover and chill. Serve over fresh Louisiana Peach slices.

Blueberry Peach Cobbler

Filling

*1/4 cup. granulated sugar

*1/4 cup brown sugar

1 tablespoon cornstarch

1/2 cup water

1 tablespoon lemon juice

*2 cups sliced Louisiana Peaches

*1 cup Louisiana Blueberries

Topping

1 cup flour

*1/2 cup sugar

1 1/2 teaspoon baking powder

*1/2 cup milk

1/4 cup soft margarine or butter

1/2 teaspoon salt

Sprinkle with mixture of 2 tablespoons sugar and 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg.

To make filling, mix sugars and cornstarch, stir in water and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, add lemon juice and fruit. Turn into a greased 2 quart baking dish. In a mixing bowl, sift together dry ingredients for topping. Add milk and margarine and beat until smooth. Spoon over fruit and sprinkle with sugar-nutmeg mixture. Bake at 375° for about 45 minutes.

Peach Stuffed Chicken Breasts

4 whole chicken breasts, boned and skinned

1 1/2 teaspoons salt, divided

1/8 teaspoon pepper

*3 Louisiana Peaches, peeled and diced

1/2 cup chopped onion

1/2 cup coarsely chopped cashews

1/8 teaspoon ground ginger

1/2 cup butter or margarine

Creamy Fresh Peach Sauce

Place each breast on a sheet of waxed paper. Flatten to 1/4 inch thickness, sprinkle 1 teaspoon salt and pepper over inside of breasts. Set chicken aside. Combine peaches, onion, cashews and ginger, stirring well. Place 1/4 cup filling in center of each breast; fold side of chicken over filling and secure with a toothpick. Melt butter in a 13x9x3 baking pan; place breasts top side down in butter. Bake at 375° for 25 minutes, turn chicken and bake 20 additional minutes. Serve with Creamy Fresh Peach Sauce.

Creamy Fresh Peach Sauce

*2 fresh Louisiana Peaches, peeled and sliced

8 oz. Sour Cream

*1/2 cup firmly packed Brown sugar

2 teaspoons Dijon Mustard

1 tablespoon brandy

1/4 teaspoon salt

Combine all ingredients in a sauce pan, place over low heat for 8 minutes or until sauce is heated thoroughly.
